

We've been talking about doing a loyalty program for a while.

Our competitors all have one, and we're losing repeat customers. The idea is pretty simple, customers earn points when they buy, whether that's online or in a store, and they can use those points for discounts or early access to sales.

We'd love it if the store staff could see who's a loyal customer when they walk in and treat them differently.

Right now, our online and in-store systems don't really talk to each other, so that's going to be a challenge. Also want to use this to get more people on the app.
